SCHEDULE TWO Y. W. MEETINGS FOR FRIDAY

Newly Renovated Home Will Be Inspected; Will Name Provi- sional Com- mittee.

Plans have been completed for the two meetings to be held at the Young Women's Christian Association building, Center Square, Friday. One meeting will be at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and the other at 7:30 in the evening, so that people interested may choose the most convenient time to be present.

The meetings will give visitors an opportunity to view the splendid improvements to the house, formerly the property of the late Mrs. Irene Reinwald, who gave it for the purposes of a Y. W. C. A. together with an endowment fund. The meetings will also give visitors an opportunity to discuss plans for the Y. W. C. A. in Adams county.

Mrs. M. Hadwin Fischer, Seminary avenue, will preside in the afternoon, at which time a representative of the Carlisle association will be present with greetings from that community. In the evening, Miss Nell Blocher, Carlisle street, will be the hostess, and greetings will be offered from Y. W. C. A.'s in Hanover and York.

Plan Demonstration

A demonstration of club work will be staged in the evening by the Girl Reserves of the Hanover Y. W. C. A. At both the afternoon and evening meetings, reports of the suggestions given for a county Y. W. C. A. here will be made and an opportunity will be given for visitors to express their ideas, according to Miss Elizabeth S. Rogers, who is assisting with the organization of the local Y.

"Since it is probable that this organization will be of service and value to every community in the county, and since people from all towns will later want to have a part in it, it is hoped that there will be large delegations from every community," Miss Rogers said today. "By attending the first meeting, people will have a chance to know from the beginning what is being done and what it is hoped to accomplish, and also to help formulate the policies of the association. A provisional committee to work until the organization is completed will be announced at this meeting."

Miss Rogers has urged that as many women as possible, women in every walk of life, attend the two meetings. "School girls, college girls, girls and women who work in factories, in stores, in business offices, in hotels, in restaurants, teachers, nurses, people from the larger towns and residents of the farming sections are all invited and urged to attend," according to Miss Rogers.

Attendance at the meetings places no obligation on those attending to join the association or to do any work in connection with its organization unless they desire, the organizer declared.

Firing Squad Fires Volley at Grave; Boy Scout Sounds Taps; Largely Attended Services.

Largely attended funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at St. James Lutheran church for James W. PEDESTRIAN IS STRUCK BY CAR

Driver of Machine Says He Was Blinded by Headlights and Was Unable to Avoid Accident.

Frank Wilcox 55, Mechanicsburg, suffered lacerations of the scalp and a possible fractured skull when he was struck by an automobile while he was walking along the Trindle road west of Camp Hill about 11 o'clock Tuesday night.

The automobile which struck Wilcox was driven by Edward C. Yost, of Mechanicsburg.

Yost and three other men were returning to their homes from work when the accident occurred. Yost said that he was blinded by the lights of an approaching car and turned his car aside to wait until the other motorist had passed.

As he hurried from the highway he noticed Wilcox walking along by the side of the road. Yost says that he shouted at Wilcox and tried to stop the car, but in vain.

Yost's car came to a halt in the ditch at the side of the road. R. W. Fish, of Mechanicsburg, came by in another automobile. One of the men from Yost's party hailed Fish who agreed to take Wilcox to the hospital. The unconscious man was put into Fish's car and rushed to the Harrisburg Hospital where his injuries were treated.

After regaining consciousness, Wilcox could give no account of the accident.

SILK MILL IS CLOSED 2 WEEKS

Curtailment of Business Schedule For Several Weeks; Expect to Resume Full Time April 6.

After running on a curtailed schedule for the past three weeks, the local silk-throwing plant of the Eagle Silk Company closed down this morning at 6 o'clock until April 6. Officials of the company hope to resume working at full time after the two-weeks' suspension.

Two hundred and twenty-five men and women, representing day and night shifts, are thrown out of employment by the shut down.

According to A. R. Jones, manager of the local silk-throwing plant, the concern has been working a curtailed schedule for the three weeks, work being done three days and three nights.

Manager Jones said he would not fully explain the shut-down by any other reason than the fact that business was not normal. "Apparently," he added, "the company wants to get rid of its surplus stock of woven goods."

The local manager said other plants of the Eagle Silk Company probably would be curtailed for several weeks as a result of the slack business.

SECOND DEGREE IS VERDICT IN MARSHALL'S CASE

Philadelphia, March 24.—David L. Marshall was today convicted of murder in the second degree for the killing of Anna May Dietrich.

The verdict carries with it a penalty of ten to 20 years in the state penitentiary. There was no demonstration either of approval or disapproval when the verdict in the gruesome case was rendered. The jury is said to have reached its decision shortly after court adjourned at 11 o'clock last night.

Marshall Unmoved
Marshall standing beside his lawyer, Abraham Wernick, received the jury's decision with impassive countenance. The cold nerve which served him through the long trial of 15 days did not desert him.

There was barely a perceptible flicker of emotion across his face when the foreman pronounced the words. He displayed greater nervousness just before the verdict was pronounced.

Smiles Slightly
A moment later he smiled slightly and shook hands with his attorney three times. It was evident though he was disappointed at not regaining his freedom but he was relieved to know that he had escaped the electric chair.

Wernick immediately announced he would ask for a new trial. Marshall was convicted of one of the most gruesome cases that ever came to the attention of the Philadelphia court. Miss Dietrich's body with head and legs cut off was found in a wooded section of Delaware county. The legs were first discovered, the head being found two days later, ten miles away. The Commonwealth produced a confession in which Marshall said he choked the girl to death during a quarrel. This confession he repudiated on the stand, but admitted cutting up the body.

"Friends Saved Me"
"My family deserted me when I needed them most, but my friends saved me," Marshall said after the verdict. "My wife, the wife who for fifteen years stood by me in every need, left me in the lurch when I needed her most. If she had been by my side during the trial I could have stood it much better. Someone kept her away from me."

"Ten long years to serve in a prison!" Marshall commented. "I am going to prison an innocent man. It is true I did cut up her body afterward."

Marshall said he was going to write his brother, H. H. Marshall, living in New York, to see if he will furnish the money for a new trial.

Would Clear Family
"If a jury says I must go to jail, then I must go," he added. "But the most important thing is to clear the name of my wife and daughter. They must live in the open world while I am back of prison doors. If I could clear their names that is all I would want."

Counsel asked Marshall if there was anything he wanted and the unlicensed chiropractor expressed a desire for his correspondence school lessons declaring he wished to continue his studies.

General MacArthur will appoint a board to draw up the rules under which the award will be made. This offer is expected to prove of great interest to all C. M. T. C. students who are already planning to make the rifle team going to Camp Perry in the late summer for the annual national rifle matches.

1,000 Applications
The C. M. T. C. officer, Third Corps Area, Baltimore, Md., announces that the first thousand applications have been received and he requests that all former students who wish to return send in their applications as soon as possible as the quotas for Fort Monroe Coast Artillery Camp and the Cavalry Camp at Fort Myer are rapidly being filled.

Colonel John B. Allison, in command of the Signal Corps Camp at Fort Monmouth, announces that they wish the men for this camp picked with special care and that they particularly desire men from technical high schools, trade schools, electrical industries, especially the radio, telephone and telegraph industries, who are interested in signal communications.

Reports are being received from local county chairmen that a number of firms are allowing the necessary vacation to employees going to camps. The United States Steel Corporation is in the lead with an announcement that its employees who attend camp will receive full pay from the company during the 30 days they are at camp.

Adams countians can secure applications from Mr. Weaver or Captain Thompson.

TOWNSHIPS TO INCREASE TAX

Petition Court For Permission to Raise Tax Rate in Order to Reduce Indebtedness.

Two townships in Adams county, upon presentation of petitions to Judge D. P. McPherson, have been allowed to increase their rate to reduce floating indebtedness incurred through road improvements and repairs.

The supervisors of Latimore township have been granted authority to increase their tax rate two mills. The present rate is 10 mills. The indebtedness of Latimore township, according to the petition of the supervisors, is $2,250.

The tax duplicate of $5,600 of the present 10 mills tax is all but exhausted, the petition sets forth in asking for the increased millage. The road supervisors of Butler township have been authorized to increase their tax rate one mill for the same purposes and for the same reason as that set forth by the supervisors of Latimore township.

The present indebtedness of Butler township is $2,700, and the duplicate of $6,000 brought in by the present 10 mills tax has been spent.

The local road building project is receiving state aid. Half of the amount of the contract will be borne by the state, while the other half will be divided fifty-fifty between the county and the borough.

Thirteen road contracts upon which the state highway department received bids yesterday broke records for the number of bids. The contracts drew 179 separate bids for a total of almost thirty-six miles of new construction and more than eight miles of grading and drainage. The aggregate of the low bids was $1,725,000.

Fourteen contractors bid for construction of almost three miles of concrete road on the Jonestown road in East Hanover township, Dauphin county, near Shellsville. This section is farther east than the three miles near Manada Hill on which the department received bids several weeks ago.

The largest number of bids on any project was twenty-nine offered for construction of more than six miles in York county, on the road connecting Glen Rock with the Lincoln Highway southwest of York.

STOCK REPORT

(By Associated Press.)

New York, March 24.—Pronounced reactionary price tendencies developed at the opening of today's stock market. General Electric dropped three points to a new low record for the year. With prices of some motors and high priced shares going to pieces, nothing seemingly could stand up under the waves of selling which swept over the market and carried over a score of industrial shares to new low prices for the year. Making up of the call money rate to four and three-fourths per cent intensified the selling movement.

LOCAL MAN IS HIT BY HAMMER

Dr. E. S. Breidenbaugh, Gettysburg College, is the subject of "The Velvet Hammer" appearing in a Harrisburg newspaper Tuesday. The "Hammer" says:

"The celebrated universe, in every stitch and line, is fashioned out of particles immeasurably fine. The chemist who can take creation's pieces most apart and recombine their fragments with the most successful art is rightly called a wizard, benefactor of his race, or any other title which befits the time and place.

"For fifty years at Gettysburg our subject for today held down the chair of chemistry and didn't stoll or stay—in fact he went to college there when rather young and frail and spent a year in teaching at the Sheffield School of Yale, but rambed back to Gettysburg ere life could much commence, since when for half a century he hasn't wandered thence.

"Some justly famous chemists in business and at large achieved their start as students in his scientific charge. In times when many scientists have wandered from the fold, he still remains a Lutheran and steady as of old. He's often been a delegate in synods of the sect, which properly appreciates his well trained intellect."

CHICAGO POLICE NAB HOLDUP MAN

(By Associated Press.)

Chicago, March 24.—William J. White, alleged slayer of a motorcycle policeman, and believed to have taken part in eight robberies which netted $224,000, is in the custody of Chicago police today.

Shortly after his arrest he was identified as the leader of a band which recently secured $80,000 in a spectacular payroll hold-up at the International Harvester Company. Three witnesses later pointed him out as the murderer of a suburban police officer.

White, known to the police as "Three-fingered Jack" as the result of his wearing a glove with two fingers stuffed to conceal the missing digits on his hand, was arrested in a suburban road house. He was armed with four revolvers and a shotgun, but was taken before he could fire a shot.

FREE-FOR-ALL POLITICAL RACE IS ON IN STATE

(By Associated Press.)

Harrisburg, March 24.—Pennsylvania's approaching primary elections today bore all the prospects of a free-for-all race with the field still open and nearly five days to go before the entries close.

Next Monday is the final day for filing nominating petitions. Today both Republicans and Democrats were confronted with contests for party nominations for U. S. Senator and governor and the prospects of more candidates and more contests before the lists were complete.

Nobel Prize Award Worth Only $31,350

Stockholm, March 24.—The Nobel prizes for 1925 will be worth approximately 117,000 kroner each (about $31,350), according to a statement just published by the Nobel Foundation. This is on the basis of the estimated net income on the estate donated by the founder, Alfred Nobel, the inventor of dynamite and other explosives.

When President Wilson was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1919 it was worth $35,644, but the passing of war-time prosperity and increased taxes have reduced the value of the prizes.

Mayor James J. Walker of New York speaking in Cincinnati, O., urged the return of beer. Money rules world diplomacy as never before, declared Sir Esme Howard, British Ambassador, in a Chicago interview. Striking Contrasts in Building of Today and Those of Years Ago

Activities of the state department in moving the loose stones. Mr. Fell also made a proposal to complete the road over Kingston mountain "by digging in the hillsides where necessary so as to make a wagon road 13 feet wide with passing places of 20 feet wide not more than forty rods apart and within view of each other so that a team of four middle sized horses may carry one ton the first ten miles from Wilkes-Barre."

Within the next quarter of a century road building showed improvement as disclosed by a report of the viewers of the Susquehanna and Waterford turnpike road to Governor William Findlay. The report said that although the road passed through heavy timber the trees were cut down so that the sun could penetrate a strip 60 feet wide. The road was found to have been completed in a "workmanlike manner." It was composed of gravel, pounded stone and other hard material "in such a manner as to secure a solid foundation and an even surface so far as the nature of the country and material will admit."

Present day requirements for concrete roads specify the mixture of rock and cement to be used, the manner in which the concrete must be placed, the material for reinforcing and the depth of foundation and surface. The base course calls for concrete composed of 7 1/2 parts of fine and coarse rock or gravel to one part cement and must be spread on a moist subgrade. For the top course finer aggregates are used with the cement. Drainage also forms an important part of the modern highway and is taken care of in the general specifications.

H. H. Shenk, architect, in charge of the state bureau of documents, has brought to light several proposals and reports which illustrate the gradual development of road construction in Pennsylvania. They begin with 1793 and end with the requirements for a modern concrete highway.

A proposal by Jesse Fell, for opening a road in 1793 from Wilkes-Barre to Wyalsburg (then Wyalsink) said: "I will open a road on the marked line, one rod wide by cutting off the timber cutting the stumps within 6 inches of the ground and rousing the tops and clearing off the logs and brush—and improve the road by re-

FIX DATE FOR PRODUCTS SHOW

Will be Held Sometime During Week of January 17, According to Decision of Committee.

The eleventh annual State Farm Products Show will be held during the week of January 17, 1927, according to a decision of the general committee meeting in Harrisburg recently. While the show will probably be held in Harrisburg, final decision on the place was left to the executive committee.

Representatives of twenty-five farm organizations, members of the Pennsylvania State College faculty and officials of the State Department of Agriculture attended the meeting. Reports were heard from Manager H. E. Klugh and other officials. John M. McKee, treasurer, reported that the recent show was the most successful in the history of the statewide exhibitions and that a small balance remains in the treasury.

Mr. Klugh reported total exhibits amounting to 3,311, a considerable increase over the number in previous shows. The number of exhibits of the various products were as follows: Corn, 455; small grains, 87; fruit, 419; potatoes, 309; wool, 102; tobacco, 128; dairy products, 155; apiary, 176; eggs, 932; poultry, 487; baby beef, 49; sheep, 12; pig-ens, 1008.

The executive committee was re-ected. The members of the committee include F. P. Willits, Secretary of Agriculture, chairman; R. H. Bell, Pennsylvania State College, secretary; Miles Horst, Lebanon, assistant secretary; J. M. McKee, Deputy Secretary of Agriculture, treasurer; H. E. Klugh, Harrisburg, manager.

Reports from the men in charge of the various exhibits indicate plans for continued expansion in all departments for next year's show. The livestock interests of the state have made plans for enlarging their exhibits from two to three times over previous shows. The poultry, pigeon and egg exhibits will be likewise considerably enlarged. Special emphasis was placed upon the junior activities, including boys' and girls' club work and the vocational school projects. A committee consisting of Miles Horst, Lebanon; A. L. Baker, Pennsylvania State College, and H. C. Fetterolf, State Department of Public Instruction, was appointed to take charge of the junior department of the 1927 show.

POLE FINDING SHIP NOW TUG

New York, March 24.—The Roosevelt, the boat in which the late Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary made his successful trip to the North Pole, has become a lowly tugboat. It put into New York yesterday towing a barge of lumber from Seattle. The vessel, which was especially built for the Arctic explorer in his polar dash of 1908, went into a Pacific Coast shipyard after Peary's death and about four years ago was converted into an ocean-going tug.

HIDES GEMS IN STOCKING AND FOILS BANDITS

Philadelphia Society Woman Thinks and Acts Quickly in N. Y. Cafe.

New York, March 24.—With $300,000 in jewels in her stocking and in the sock of her escort, Mrs. Isaac George Waterman, widow of a wealthy Philadelphia coal operator, stood at her table in the Owl Night Club early yesterday while four armed bandits searched the guests for money and valuables.

The bandits arrived in an automobile backed the doorman into the club and advanced with drawn revolvers on the couples seated at tables. Women diners became hysterical and several fainted. The leader of the bandits ordered the orchestra to play and began robbing the guests to the lively dance music.

Mrs. Waterman hastily removed a string of pearls, which she said are worth $200,000, and slipped them into her stocking.

While Robert Wormser, of White Plains, a widely known horseman and son of the late Kess Worser, stood in front of them, cloaking their surreptitious movements, Mrs. Waterman transferred her diamond bracelet and two rings, worth in all some additional $100,000, to Frank Bach, of Purchase, New York, also a frequent exhibitor in horse shows.

Escort Hides $100,000 Gems. Mr. Bach wrapped the jewels in a napkin and stuffed the parcel in his sock top, then hitched his trousered leg down to conceal the lump. The transaction was unobserved by the bandits.

The bandits, who had taken $350 from the cash drawer, piled several hundred dollars more of money and valuables taken from guests on a tablecloth in the center of the dance floor, ready for removal.

Meanwhile, two cabaret girls, waiting to do their turn, observed the proceedings from their balcony dressing room. Slipping unobserved to a fire-escape, they made their way to the street and summoned Policemen Green, who called headquarters for reserves and started for the scene.

NUNS MAY SERVE ON JURIES HERE

First Catholic Sister in Pennsylvania Called on Pittsburgh Grand Jury.

For the first time in the history of Pennsylvania, a nun has been called for duty on a Pittsburgh grand jury.

Priests and nuns have never served on juries in this state, but under the provisions of the Patterson bill, which was passed at the 1925 session of the legislature, they will be required to serve. "The law will not effect Adams county this year because the 1926 jury wheel has already been filled, and names of local priests and nuns have not been placed on the lists.

The first nun called for jury duty in Pittsburgh is Mary Ambrosia Timon, a Sister of Charity of St. Luke's Parochial School, Carnegie.

At the time the new jury bill was introduced it carried a provision making service optional with women jurors. At the last minute however, the League of Women Voters through Senator Mansfield, had an amendment inserted, making it obligatory for women to serve the same as men. The women objected to any distinction being made between the women and men.

Vetoe Predicted. The sponsors of the jury reform bill had steadfastly opposed making jury service compulsory as far as the women were concerned, but they had to either accept the amended bill or have it defeated. The women, it is understood, had the assurance of Governor Pinchot that the bill would be vetoed unless the amendment pertaining to the women was included.

"Unfortunately, under the provisions of the jury reform bill, the sister from St. Luke's will have to serve on the jury, distasteful as it may be for her," Attorney Oliver K. Eaton, who sponsored the jury reform bill at the last session, said today. "Our original bill made it optional with the women, but the League of Women Voters inserted the amendment in the last minute, and it was either take or reject it—the bill was in jeopardy."

Movie Stars Are Forced To Charter Train To Get Home

Merced, Calif., March 4.—A special train was chartered Tuesday by Buster Keaton and Roscoe (Patty) Arbuckle, movie actors, to get themselves, their wives and Arbuckle's motorcar out of the Yosemite Valley, where state road officials had forbidden them to drive.

Arbuckle drove into the valley over the New Bryceburg road last Sunday. Mrs. Arbuckle and the Keatons were together. The party managed to get past guards, regardless of the fact that the road is not yet open to the public and a regulation that women are not allowed to pass through prison road camps along the roadway.

When highway officials at Sacramento heard about the trip they ordered the party barred from the return journey over the highway.

He stopped to look at me in inquiry, my manner showing so great a curiosity in him that his passion was all scattered before it. Then he stepped up to the table and lifted the paper. As he read, his hand shook, amazement dilated his eyes and furrowed his brow.

"What—what does it signify?" he gasped.

"It signifies that, although fully conscious of having won, I prefer to acknowledge that I have lost. I make over to you thus my estates of Bardelys, because, monsieur, I have come to realize that that wager was an infamous one—one in which a gentleman should have had no part—and the only atonement I can make—to myself, my honour, and the lady whom we assaulted—is that."

"I do not understand," he complained.

"I apprehend your difficulty, Comte. The point is a nice one. But understand at least that my Picardy estates are yours. Only, monsieur, you will be well advised to make your will forthwith, for you are not destined, yourself, to enjoy them."

He looked at me, his glance charged with inquiry.

"His Majesty," I continued, in answer to his glance, "is ordering your arrest for betraying the trust he had reposed in you and for per-surprise it had occasioned me now returned upon seeing him so obviously and intimately seeking Chatellerault.

The Count turned on him in his anger.

"Well, popinjay?" he roared.

"What do you want with me?"

"Monsieur le Comte!" cried the other, in blunt indignation and reproach.

"You will perceive that you are come inopportune," I put in. "Monsieur de Chatellerault is not quite himself."

But my speech again drew his attention to my presence, and the wonder grew in his eyes at finding me there, for to him I was still Lesperon the rebel, and he marvelled naturally that I should be at large.

Then in the corridor there was a sound of steps and voices, and as I turned I beheld in the doorway, behind Saint-Eustache, the faces of Castelroux, Mironsac, and my old acquaintance, the babbling, irresponsible buffoon, La Fosse. From Mironsac he had heard of my presence in Toulouse, and, piloted by Castelroux, they were both come to seek me out. I'll swear it was not thus they had looked to find me.

They pushed their way into the room, impelling Saint-Eustache forward, and there were greetings exchanged and felicitations, whilst Chatellerault, curbing his disorder, drew the Chevalier into a corner of the baneful influences of which men carry charms. A moment he stood so, eyeing me. Then, coming a step nearer—

"You do not think that you can fight me, eh? You do not think it? Pardon! How shall I make you change your mind? To the insult of words you appear impervious. You imagine your courage above dispute because by a lucky accident you killed La Ver-tolle some years ago, and the fame of it has attached to you." In the intensity of his anger he was breathing heavily, like a man overburdened. "You have been living ever since by the reputation which that accident gave you. Let us see if you can die by it, Monsieur de Bardelys." And, leaning forward, he struck me on the breast, so suddenly and so powerfully—for he was a man of abnormal strength—that I must have fallen but that La Fosse caught me in his arms.

"Kill him!" hissed the classic minded fool. "Play Thesus to this bull of Marathon!" Chatellerault stood back, his hands on his hips, his head inclined towards his right shoulder, and an insolent leer of expectancy upon his face.

"Will that resolve you?" he sneered.

"I will meet you," I answered, when I had recovered breath. "But I swear that I shall not help you to escape the headsman."

He laughed harshly.

"Do I not know it?" he mocked.

"How shall killing you help me to escape? Come, messieurs, sortons. At once!"

"Soft!" I answered shortly; and thereupon we crowded from the room, and went pe-le-me-le down the passage to the courtyard at the back.

CHAPTER XVI

Swords

La Fosse led the way with me, his arm through mine, sweating that he would be my second. He had such a stomach for a fight, had this irresponsible, irresponsible rhymester, that it mounted to the heights of passion with him, and when I mentioned, in answer to a hint dropped in connection with the edict, that I had the King's sanction for this combat, he was nearly mad with joy.

"Blood of La Fosse!" was his oath. "The honour to stand by you shall be mine, my Bardelys! You owe it me, for am I not in part to blame for all this ado? Nay, you'll not deny me. That gentleman yonder, with the wildcat moustaches and a name like a Gascon oath—that cousin of Mironsac's, I mean—has the flair of a fight in his nostrils, and a craving to be in it. But you'll grant me the honour, will you not? Pardon! It will earn me a place in history."

"Or the graveyard," quoth I, by way of cooling his ardour.

"Peste! What an augury!" Then with a laugh: "But," he added, in dialectic Saint-Eustache, "thou long, lean saint—I forgot of what he is patron—hardly wears a murderous air."

To win peace from him, I promised that he should stand by me. But the favour lost much of its value in his eyes when presently I added that I did not wish the seconds to engage, since the matter was of so very personal character.

Mironsac and Castelroux, assisted by Saint-Eustache, closed the heavy porte-cochere, and shut us in from the observations of passers-by. The clanging of those gates brought the landlord and a couple of his knaves, and we were subjected to the prayers and intercessions, to the stormings and ravings that are even the prelude of a stable-yard fight but which invariably end, as these ended, in the landlord's withdrawal to run for help to the nearest corps-de-garde.

"Now, my myrmillones," cried La Fosse in bloodthirsty jubilation, "to work before the host returns."

"Po! Cap de Diou!" growled Castelroux, "is this a time for jests master Jokers?"

"Jests?" I heard him retorting as he assisted me to doff my don't let. "Do I jest? Diable! You Gascons are a slow-witted folk! have a taste for allegory, my friend, but that never yet was as counted so low a thing as jesting. At last we were ready, and shifted the whole of my attention to the short, powerful figure of Chatellerault as he advanced upon me, stripped to the waist, his face set and his eyes full of stern resolve. Despite his low stature and the breadth of frame which argue sluggish motion, there was something very formidable about the Count. His bared arms were great masses of muscular flesh and his wrist were but half a supple as it looked powerful, the alone should render him a dangerous antagonist.

HIGH PLANS TO REPEAT B. B. FEAT

Record of Sixteen Victories Is Goal of Maroon and White National Pastime Performers.

(By Don Bee)

Coach Reynolds resumed baseball practice Monday night with a long batting practice followed by a short fielding drill. The players slugged the ball hard and seem to be rarin' to go. Last night's practice was much the same as Monday's, with the fielding practice extended. Tennant and Gibbs loosened up some stiff muscles with brief workouts. Utz was worked in the infield at first base and although it is too early to pick a team, the little pitcher may see some workout besides that of on the mound.

The team has a big job on hand to equal last year's record. Playing sixteen contests last year's Maroon and White champions went undefeated. They pushed 141 men over the rubber in the season for an average of 8.81 runs per game. The opponents landed 33 runs for an average of little better than 2 runs per game. Averaging practically nine runs a game and holding the opponents to an average of 2 runs a tilt is no little feat and to equal or better a record like that will be some task. Six of the sixteen victories were won via the shut-out route.

The task in developing the team this year will be in rounding out a formidable infield. Moser, McKendrick and Heiges who formed the right wall of defense in the infield of last year's squad were lost by graduation and to fill their shoes will be the main work of Coach Reynolds.

BUOHL ELECTED CAPTAIN OF HIS CAGE FIVE, '26

Chauncey Buohl, star forward on the Maroon and White quintet for the past two years, was elected captain for next season at a meeting of the lettermen on Tuesday. As well as playing a fine game on the court, Buohl starred at a wing position on the Maroon and White eleven last season.

Buohl played his second year on the varsity this season and proved to be a valuable man on both offense and defense. The captain-elect plays either forward or center with ability and led the high school scorers for the past season. His experience and fighting qualities make his selection ideal for a pilot for next year's machine.

THE SNOW MAN

When a little miss of three,
Full of life as she can be,
Wants to go and make a snow man
Underneath the maple tree,
And she begs of you to come
Where the cold will freeze you numb,
Just to please that little lady
Do you risk an ear or thumb?

Now I'm certain I'm too old
To go fooling in the cold,
But she wouldn't understand it
If the simple truth I told,
So as brave as I could be
I agreed to go and see
If a snow man could be builded
Underneath the maple tree.

Chattered teeth and rattled knees,
And I thought my feet would freeze.
But the happy little lady
Laughed as gayly as you please,
And we rolled the ball of snow
Just as high as it would go,
But the pain I was enduring
Was a thing she couldn't know.

Now I'm lying in my bed
And I scarce can raise my head,
And the mother sits and tells me
It's a wonder I'm not dead,
But the little miss of three
Just as proudly as can be
Shows to all our lovely snow man
Underneath the maple tree.

Little Jack Rabbit

by David Cory

As the Yellow Dog Tramp trotted down the street after having mended dear Uncle Lucky's broken chimney, as I mentioned in the story before this, all of a sudden the telephone went tinkler, tinkler, tink, tink, tink! Quick as a sunbeam through a chink! and Lady Love's voice called over the wire; "The kitchen fire has all gone out; There isn't a stick of wood about."

"Cheer up, little lady," answered nice Uncle Lucky, "I'll drive right down to the coal yard," and turning to his small bunny nephew he told him to put on his hat and come along. Although it was the last of March, the wind was chilly and dirty little patches of snow still lingered in the shady hollows and along the Old Stone Fence. But it was such clear, cool weather that Old Man Rheumatism never bothered dear Uncle Lucky's little pinky toe. In fact, he felt so frisky that he suddenly stopped the Luckymobile and hopped out to see who was singing in a little bush close by.

"Chick-a-dee, chick-a-dee, You're as happy as I can be. So am I. What do I care If the earth is chill and bare. In my feather coat and cap I can stand the coldest snap," sang Charlie Chick-a-dee, that merry little bird.

"So can we," answered Uncle Lucky. "We haven't a stick of wood nor a lump of coal, nor a drop of kerosene, but we'll manage to keep warm if I get to the coal yard," and with a wink at the cheerful bird, the old gentleman rabbit hopped back into his famous car and started off again.

Pretty soon not so very far, some one called out; "Please stop a minute. My fire's gone out."

And there isn't a stick of wood about," and Old Grandmother Goose clapped her wings from her tiny front porch.

"I'm on my way to the coal-yard," shouted Uncle Lucky. "I'll try to bring you back a scuttle of coal," and on he went. But, dearest me! He had hardly left his little green house when Mrs. Duck, Dr. Quack's wife, called out from an upper window; "I'm chilled to the feather and chilled to the bone;

My nice little bungalow's cold as a stone."

"I'm on my way to the coal-yard," shouted Uncle Lucky. "Maybe if I'm as fortunate as my name I can bring you back a scuttle of coal to help you keep warm, you good old soul." And on sped the kind old gentleman rabbit, now and again smiling down at his little rabbit nephew, as the good Luckymobile rolled along and the big tin horn blew a honk-honk song. But, dearest me! again, because I just said it a minute ago, before Mrs. Duck made her complaint, all of a sudden Auntie Hen cackled from her pretty house in Chickentown;

"I've nothing to build my fire anew,—Not an old pine knot, not a stick of yew."

"Maybe I can help you," shouted Uncle Lucky. "I'm on my way to the coal yard. Will try to bring you a scuttle of coal to help you keep warm, you poor old soul." And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

IT HAS LASTED

Gettysburg People Must Believe Such Convincing Testimony as Mr. Cook's.

No one in Gettysburg who suffers backache, headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains or distressing urinary ills can afford to ignore this twice-old story of a Gettysburg resident. It is confirmed testimony, telling of last-thing benefit from Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. It's evidence that no man or woman in Gettysburg can doubt.

Robert J. Cook, 32 N. Stratton St., Gettysburg, says: "My kidneys were out of fix and the secretions were retarded in passage. Mornings my back felt lame and when I bent over, sharp pains ran through it. I bought Doan's Pills at the People's Drug Store and they fixed up my back and flushed my kidneys." (Statement given April 11, 1921.)

On January 8, 1926, Mr. Cook said: "Doan's Pills rid me of kidney ailment and I think a great deal of them." 60c. at all dealers. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.—adv.

MOTHER BURNS HER BABY AS A LIVING SACRIFICE

Milan.—A tragic story of mother love was unfolded when Signora Luisa Paldecchio was placed on trial for murdering her 3-months-old baby. As a result the charge of murder was dismissed and the prisoner was sent to an asylum for the insane. It appeared that the mother lost her mind when her three older children died in a scarlet fever epidemic and had the delusion that if she offered up a living sacrifice the dead children would be returned to her. Accordingly she built an altar in her home and burned her baby alive as a sacrifice. Physicians stated at the trial she would never recover her reason.

The physician heals, Nature makes well.

SHOULD HUSBANDS DO HOUSE WORK?

How Mrs. Dyer Solved the Problem.

Mrs. Mildred Dyer was lucky. She had a good-natured husband who helped her with much of her housework. Because she was in ill health for five years, it was often necessary for him to do this. But it bothered Mrs. Dyer. She felt that he had to work hard enough anyway. The time he spent in doing her work was needed for his own. She determined to find the road to better health.

She writes: "I think Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is simply wonderful. My health is better than it has ever been. I am getting stronger and gaining in weight."

She has solved her problem and her household is happier. The Dyers live at Redlands, Cal., Route A, Box 132.

How often does your husband have to do your housework? No matter how willing he is, no woman feels comfortable about it. Perhaps you, too, will find better health through the faithful use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Child health's surest safeguard against sickness is meals planned to include the right kind of nourishment

THERE is a way to build the resistance of children to the germs that cause sickness.

Of course the best way is to avoid the germ itself, if possible.

But modern health has not yet solved that problem completely, so that the best thing is to build the child to resist the germs, if he does get them.

Mothers, child health specialists declare, should select certain foods, those composed of just the right growth and health-promoting elements for the years of most rapid growth and least resistance to disease.

Some foods more than others promote natural development and growth and build up a resistance against which disease germs are less likely to get the upper hand.

Quick Mother's Oats with milk is one of the most important foods containing helpful amounts of the growth and health-promoting elements.

One cup of each contains 23% or nearly one-fourth of the total amount of protein needed by a growing child in one day.

This food substance called protein, a name that comes from the Greek word "proteus," meaning "to hold first place," is the most important of all food principals during the growth years and is the material which forms the tissue-out of which the body is made.

The natural growth and development which Quick Mother's Oats with milk helps to promote increases resistance during the very period when susceptibility is greatest.

Thank the careful millers of this trusted brand for noticeably better flavor, too. Children like it, grownups too. Certainly no other breakfast dish combines appeal in flavor with benefits to the growth and health of growing children to such a remarkable degree—ready in 3 to 5 minutes.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

FAITH

THIS IS an old subject. But it is one we think of probably more than any other, for it is the very foundation of our hope, here and now and in the substance of our belief in an eternal life.

Faith closes our eyes at night and opens them in the morning. Faith tiptoes into our chambers and tells us of the day. Then it trails along with us throughout the hours and sustains us in all our various activities.

We think out our ideas. We weigh them. Then we dress them up in the clothes of Faith and send them out into the world.

We do business every hour and every day on faith. Everything we eat, drink, or use, we give our faith to. When we go on a long journey, we place our faith in the man who runs the train, our automobile, or our ship. When we get low and a storm cloud of worry comes our way, Faith is the sunshine that sooner or later clears the storm.

The farmer tills and the sweat rolls from his brow as he turns the soil, but he is cheerful and happy for he has faith that his labors will be fruitful. You can't keep house, or school, or your shop without faith.

We all do different things with our faith. It doesn't matter so much what. For faith is to apply and no two do the same job the same way. Faith is to keep us sweet and unbending in courage. Faith is to keep us on the way that is safest, not the swiftest or the shortest.

Faith leads us by the hand.
